

This final week of our project, we got together with our BA for the last and final time to wrap everything up for the project. They ran through their use cases, scenarios, and final prototype with us. The outcome of your final product was stunning. They included many functions that I have not expected to actually work. They have almost every document deliverable completed since it isn't due until Monday, so they have a little bit of time to finish. Overall, the process of completing this project, the BA's has done well. They have done almost every task and worked step by step into completing this project. They then presented on Thursday and I asking them, they say that the presentation went well. This is a good news to hear, hopefully they get a good grade from it.
