

Edward Shen

This week for our project the BA's work on their extra credit that is based off of Justinmind Prototype. We have our last expert coming in this week for our last interview. When we ask the BAs if their interview question were ready, they did not even remember that they have an interview. This surprises me that they do not remember their interview because it is very important to get an accurate information to create our scope. However after our meeting, they had time to create questions for their interview the next day. This week meeting, even though not a lot of people can make it (including some PMs and BAs), the BAs seems to have some trouble with their Justinmind Prototype and how to operate it. I gave them some pointer and we look at some examples. In the end I hope they understand the concept of how to operate the software and they completed the extra credit.